

Learn How To Draw A Muscle Car For Kids: Ford Mustang

- Tutorials

by Roman - October 1, 2013 9

www.juniorcardesigner.com

This is the second tutorial on how to draw a muscle car. If you liked the last tutorial you're going to love this one. You'll learn how to draw a Ford Mustang, one of the most iconic and famous car ever. So here we go!

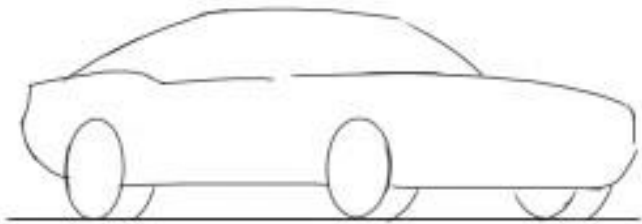

The wheelbase on a '60s Mustang is a little long so don't make it too short.

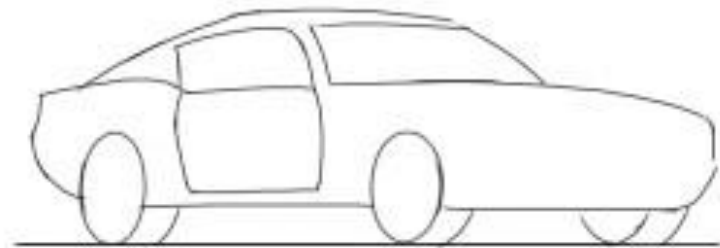

The body's proportions are medium waistline, medium ground clearance but it can also be a little high and long rear overhang. The front one isn't as long so draw the front far side-wheel very close to the front corner of the body.

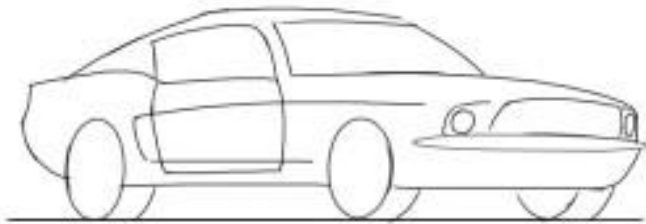

The rear part of the cabin is very inclined, noticeably more than the front. The height of the roof is medium also.

Draw the windshield, the side window and the door. The window is leaned towards the back a little bit.

This is the most fun part. Now we start detailing this car drawing. Draw the front lights and a line that kind of wraps around them. Put a very wide bumper and on top of that draw the grill. One of the most distinctive things on a Mustang. Now draw the also distinctive pseudo-air intake on the side of the car.

We are almost done here. These are the finishing details. Draw the usual things like the side mirrors, door handle and the rims. After that draw a triangle shape at the back of the side window with a couple of vertical lines in it. This is another particular design feature of the Mustang. Let's make the front of the car look more detailed by drawing a couple of lines on the hood that go from the head light to the windshield. Just beneath the bumper draw two vertical extensions of it and right beside them put some fog lights. And finally draw two more lights in the grill and a little Mustang logo right at the middle.

