Important Information for the Residents of Lower Dauphin School District

Sherri L. Smith, Ed.D.

Message

It's a time of transition here in Lower Dauphin. We're a third of the way through our school year and our students have transitioned into their new classes. It's also a time of transition for our new teachers, new administrators and me personally as I will be leaving the district in January and Dr. Robert Schultz will assume the superintendency.

One of the hallmarks of this school district is the close relationship between our students and our community.

We're off to a great start this year. Our students celebrated Veterans Day and fire prevention month by bringing in community members to create authentic learning experiences. Our community and schools celebrated Homecoming with the crowning of the King and Queen and recognizing five community members for their contributions to Lower Dauphin. One of the hallmarks of this school district is the close relationship between our students and our community. I am always gratified to see the way our community embraces our schools and assists our students.

As I leave this district after 18 years, 15 as superintendent, that is a legacy I am proud to have supported and to pass on. Serving Lower Dauphin has been the honor of a lifetime.

With Falcon Pride,

Sherri L. Smith, Ed.D.
Superintendent

Dr. Robert Schultz addresses the community at a meeting in October.

Schultz named superintendent

Dr. Robert K. Schultz was named Lower Dauphin's fifth superintendent of schools by the school board on November 20. His starting date will be sometime in the beginning of 2018.

Dr. Schultz is currently superintendent of the Tulpehocken Area School District in Berks County, a position he has held for the past three years. Prior to that he was assistant superintendent and assistant to the superintendent in Lower Dauphin for six years. He was also middle school principal from 2003 to 2008.

He listed four goals for his first year as Lower Dauphin's superintendent:

- He wants to gather information and have conversations with different stakeholder groups (students, staff, parents and community members) and take an inventory of where Lower Dauphin is as a district.
- He plans to build upon the strengths of the district. There are many great things happening at Lower Dauphin and he plans to support the current initiatives while keeping an eye on academic excellence, which he called the district's core mission.

Schultz: Familiar face to be LD's fifth superintendent

- He expects to establish a strong community presence by attending concerts, sporting events and being visible and then building relationships and partnerships in the community at large.
- Finally, he plans to maintain effective communications with the community and staff in the district. Doing this will allow all stakeholders to understand their schools' operations and accomplishments.

"During my previous time here I had the opportunity to work with great students, supportive parents who were involved in the education of their children and a community that truly supports the district and takes pride in their schools," he said.

"I worked with an outstanding group of educators and with a board of school directors that had and still has great vision and that understands what a quality education system can do for individuals and for the community."

Special athletes compete in fall games

"Let me win. But if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt." This is the motto of Special Olympics athletes, and that bravery was on display in October at East Pennsboro High School.

Lower Dauphin sent 56 athletes to compete in the annual track & field games. They were accompanied by 136 buddies – high school students who helped the athletes navigate their day and cheer them to victory or to their valiant attempt.

As senior buddy Clay Spencer explained, "I get a lot out of going to Special Olympics to support and cheer on my fellow friends and athletes. It's a great joy to assist and encourage these athletes."

State standardized test scores, building ratings released

Lower Dauphin received its annual report from the state Department of Education regarding its students' performance on standardized tests from spring 2017.

When looking at the achievement of students on the Pennsylvania System of School Assessment and Keystone Exam tests, every Lower Dauphin school continued to exceed the state average.

Superintendent Sherri Smith said the district will not focus on the overall score of the School Performance Profiles (SPP) as the measures for these results will be changing under new regulations. "At Governor Wolf's direction and under Secretary Rivera's leadership, the department launched an extensive outreach strategy to engage education stakeholders on how to make the SPP a more holistic measurement tool for schools and communities," she explained. "A change to the reporting of results is anticipated for the 2018 PSSA/Keystone testing."

The district's scores in English/language arts (ELA) in grades 3-5 were 76.3 percent advanced and proficient as compared with the state's score of 61.7 percent. Middle school ELA scores were similarly 76 percent advanced and proficient compared with the state average of 61 percent. District math scores in grades 3-5 were 67 percent advanced and proficient compared with the state average of 48.4 percent. The middle school's scores in math for grades 6-8 were 50 percent advanced and proficient compared with 43 percent at the state. At the high school, performance in the three subjects tested by the Keystone Exam were 84 percent advanced and proficient in Algebra, 78 percent in biology and 87 percent in literature – compared with the state averages of 66, 63, and 73 percent.

LD Alumni Association honors five

Lower Dauphin Alumni Association honored five community members for contributions to the district and community during the homecoming football game.

This year's honorees include: Timothy Bartholomew, Class of 1976, who was recognized for his continuing service with the Lower Dauphin School District's Camp Hebron outdoor education program for fifth-graders; Patricia Hall Krow, Class of 1973, who was recognized for her years (past and ongoing) of commitment to the community; Dr. Kirk (Wade) Seibert, Class of 1965, who was recognized for his devotion to the many endeavors of the alumni association; Kurt Stoner, Class of 1985, who was recognized for entrepreneurship and the national recognition and success of Stoner Graphics; and Sally Zaino, community member, who was recognized as one of the original founders of the Manada Conservancy and her many years of stewardship of the area's watersheds, forests, and fields.

Patti Krow, Tim Bartholomew, Kurt Stoner and Sally Zaino received awards October 27.

Secretary Sharon Hagy administers the oath to Cassie.

School board appoints students

The Lower Dauphin Board of School Directors appointed high school junior Cassandra McIntire to serve as Associate Student School Board Representative. She will serve beside high school senior Alexandra Sassaman, who returns for a second year as student school board representative.

Cassie is the daughter of Steve and Shelly McIntire. She is a member of the softball team, band and participates in Student Council and the Volunteer club.

Allie, the daughter of David and Lynn Sassaman, is a member of the cross country and lacrosse teams. She plays violin in the orchestra and is a two year-member of the Young Republicans.

King, Queen crowned at Homecoming

Connor Buggy and Meredith Atkins were named Homecoming King and Queen during the high school's annual festivities. Connor is the son of Ken and Deb Buggy. Meredith is the daughter of Ken and Amy Atkins.

Schools honor veterans' service

Veterans were honored across the district in ceremonies in our schools in November.

Many of the ceremonies featured a guest speaker who explained the meaning of Veterans Day and the importance of service both in the military and in civilian life. There were patriotic music and flag ceremonies as well.

At the high school, veterans visited for a few hours and met with small groups of students in the school library. This format allowed students to interact and learn from these living history sources – from World War II through conflicts in Korea, Vietnam, the Cold War and the current War on Terror.

Second-graders learn about butterflies

“Proboscis!” two dozen second-graders at Nye Elementary School shouted with glee when asked how butterflies drink nectar. It might be their favorite word they’ve learned this school year – knowledge gained through a six-week unit on caterpillars and butterflies. Though it’s not going to appear on the state tests they’ll take next year, this kind of hands-on lesson is something they’ll remember forever.

The unit started when they arrived in their classrooms in August. Butterflies and caterpillars decorated the three Nye Elementary School second-grade classrooms. In each room was a mesh tent with milkweed leaves, which is the preferred food of monarch butterfly caterpillars. Teachers Carol Gallerizzo, Paula McCreary, and Maria Shaffer had to make frequent trips to their secret milkweed patch to keep their crawly visitors’ bellies filled.

There was great excitement when the eggs hatched and the caterpillars, each the size of a grain of rice, began to munch on the leaves and grow. “I liked how much the baby caterpillar changes,” explained second-grader Remington Eisenhower.

Then it was time for the pupa stage when the caterpillars form the chrysalis, which according to second-graders is not the same as a cocoon, to begin their transformation.

“My favorite thing about butterflies is the evolution. The evolution is egg, caterpillar, pupa, adult and that’s it!” said second-grader Declan Miller.

When the butterflies emerge, it’s an all-grade activity to release them into the Hummelstown skies to the farewell waves of their second-grade friends. “My favorite part was when we saw them flying and one landed on my hand and we watched it,” said second-grader Matty Pavlick.

Memories from second-grade that will last a lifetime.

Two honored by Merit Scholar program

Senior Abigail Mauger was recently confirmed as a Semifinalist in the National Merit Scholarship Program. Abbie is the daughter of Elizabeth and David Mauger. She is a four-year member of the orchestra, playing the viola.

Abbie Mauger

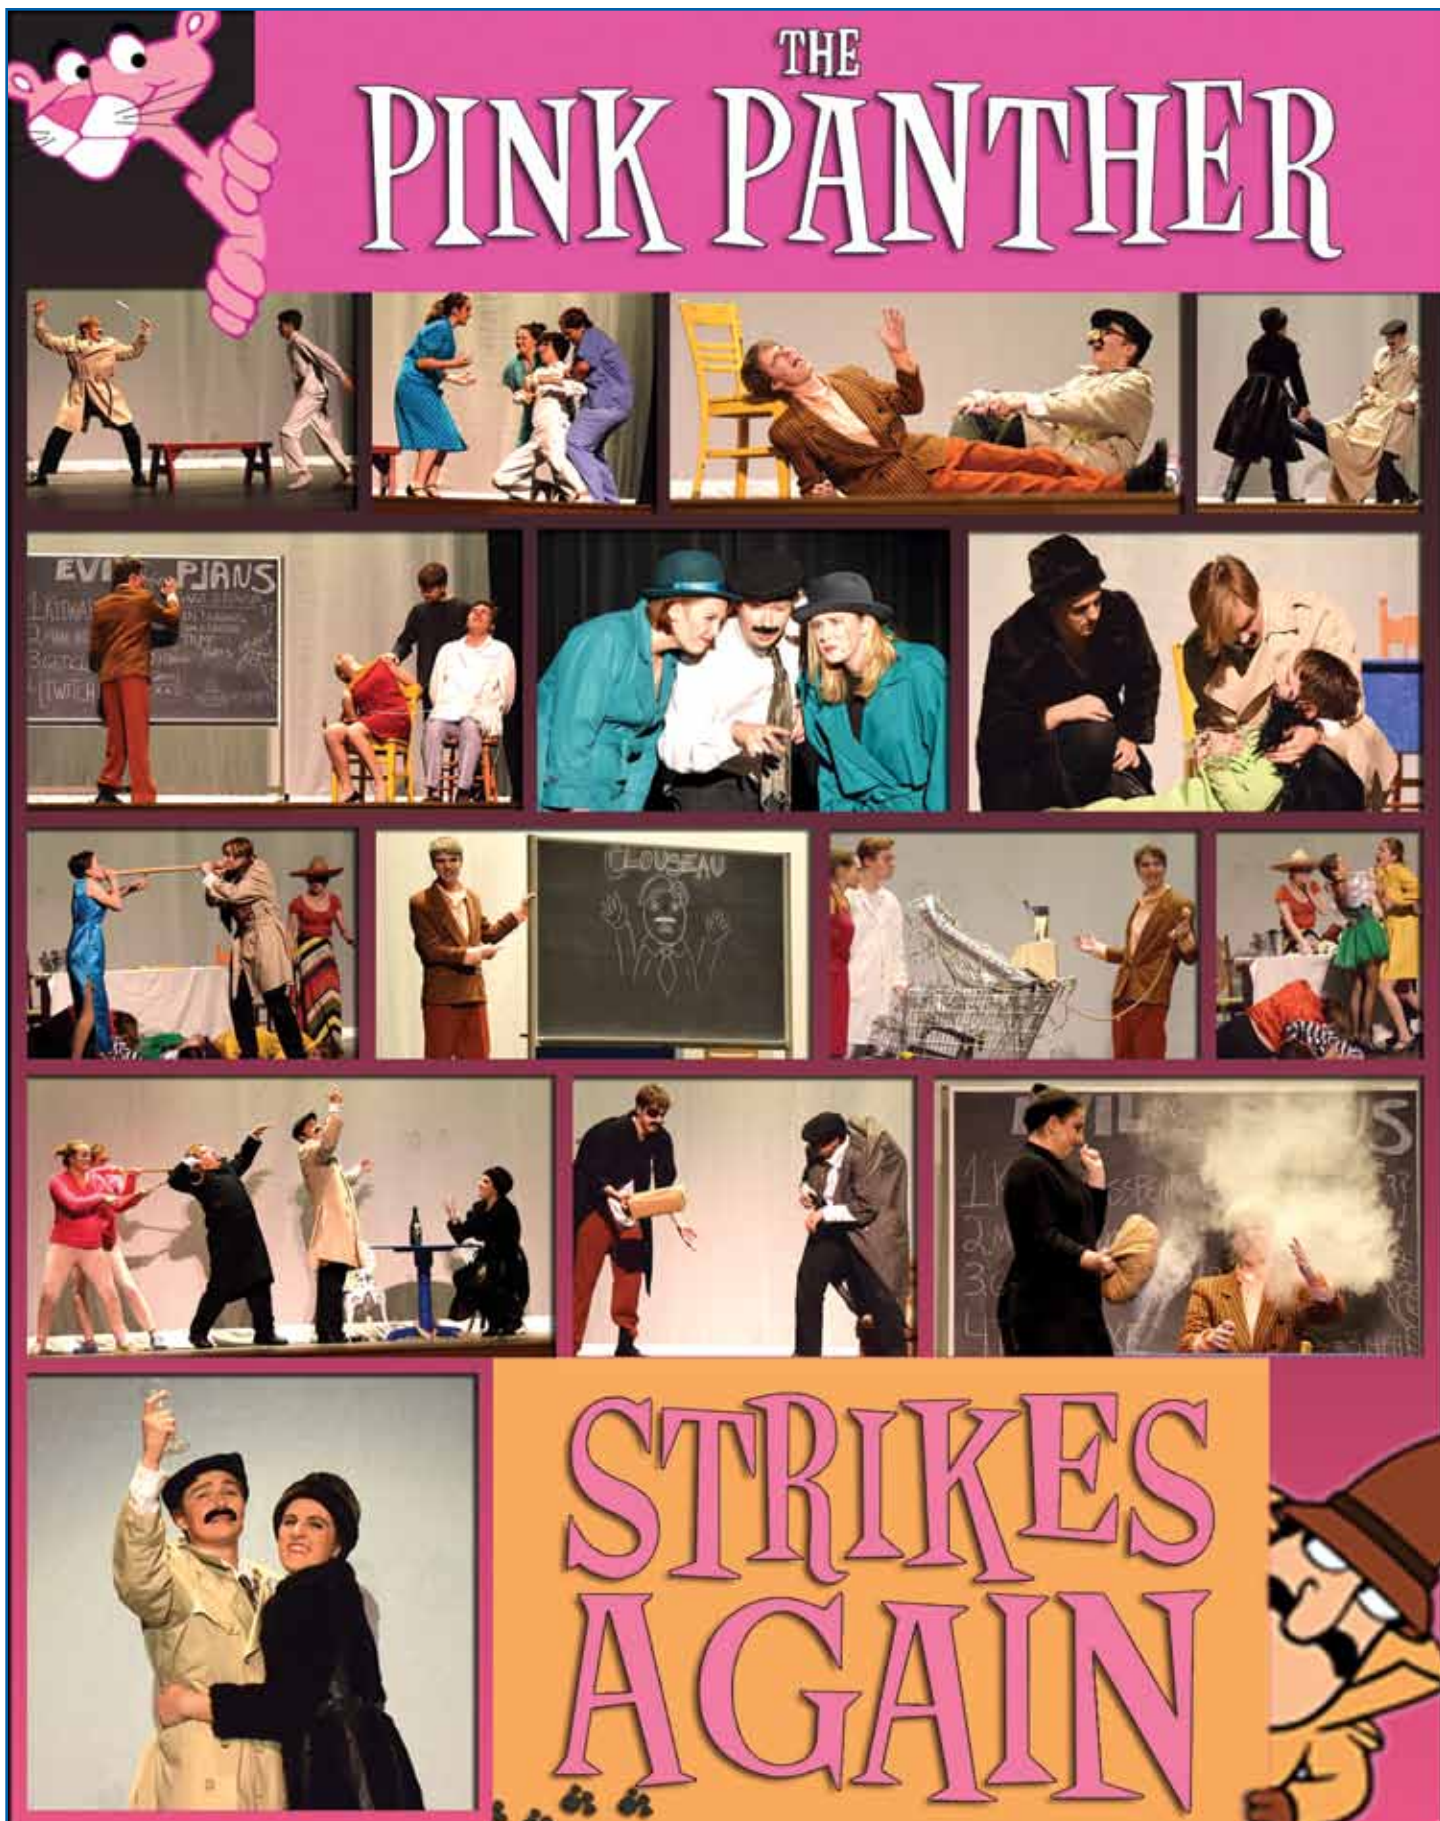

Rory Klingensmith

As a National Merit Semifinalist, she is one of 16,000 students selected for their scores on the PSAT among the 1.6 million taking the test. Her next step will be advancing to the National Merit Finalist level which will be announced in the spring.

Rory Klingensmith was named a Commended Student in the National Merit Scholarship Program. The daughter of Jennifer and Donald Klingensmith, she is captain and a four-year member of the girls soccer team and she is also a four-year member of the track & field team. Rory is a four-year member of the orchestra, playing the cello. As a commended student, she was one of she is one of 34,000 students selected for their scores on the PSAT.

“Both these young ladies represent the best qualities of Falcon PRIDE – perseverance, respect, integrity, discipline and excellence,” said Justin Hanula, school principal. “We are very proud of their achievement in the National Merit Scholarship program and look forward to continued successes for each of them.”

The high school fall play “The Pink Panther Strikes Again!” delighted audiences with its farcical action, word play and outrageous accents. It featured Wolfgar Ramsey, Matthew Little, Larry Sausnight, Collin Stamey, Chiara Meyers, Olivia Meyers, Madi Miduri, Brook Drescher and Brayden Harris, among others.

Band students in grades 5-12 performed together in the annual Mass Band Night.

LD bands join together for night of music

Halftime of the Lower Dauphin-Red Land football game on September 29 featured hundreds of students performing music to the delight of the crowd.

About 85 fifth-graders from all five Lower Dauphin elementary schools joined together in the annual Mass Band Night at Hersheypark Stadium to perform "Slip Slide," a song written by retired LD music teacher Jim Neidinger. Preparing the students for their performance were music teachers Jessica O'Donnell, Jessica Zampelli and Jason Irvin.

The high school and middle school bands then took the field with a performance of Justin Timberlake's hit song "Can't Stop the Feeling." These combined bands featured over 280 musicians under the leadership of high school drum majors Shontonel Dillon and Shea Sarsfield. Student leaders include Erin Bell and Mel Salli, flute; Emilie Goss and Emily Scholfield, clarinet; Lizzy Scipione and Dan Little, saxophone; James Rodgers and KC Truesdell, trumpet; Keely Schrum, mellophones Ian Bruce and Colin Yohn, low brass; Ian Tonkin and Alli Kreider, percussion; Mackenzie Pell, Shannon McCreary, and Erynne DeLano, color guard. Band directors are Keith Richardson, high school, and Greg Hutchison, middle school.

After this performance, the high school marching band took the field alone to present some selections from its fall show "Classical Chaos" which uses popular themes from classical music and splices them together in new, original, and exciting ways. For example, Movement I introduces Mozart's "Minuet in G." Movement II begins the chaos with interjections of Bach and Strauss. The finale is a duel between Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and the percussion section.

Firefighters teach students

Firefighters from Lower Dauphin's five fire companies visited our elementary schools in October during Fire Prevention Week.

Their message was to teach students what to do should there be a fire in their homes and the importance of having a family evacuation plan. In addition, they demonstrated their equipment and gear for the students.

Board names three new administrators

In September the school board named Dan Berra pupil services director, replacing Dr. Andrew McCrea. Mr. Berra has been with the district since 2003, serving for the past nine years as middle school principal. Prior to that, he held positions as high school assistant principal and middle school dean of students. He taught math and computer science at the high school for three years before joining the administration.

Daniel Berra

Jill A. Freedman

Stephanie Vaughn

In October, the board named Jill A. Freedman as middle school principal. Ms. Freedman had been an assistant principal at Lower Dauphin High School, a position she has held since 2014. She came to Lower Dauphin in 2005 as a middle school science teacher.

The board then named Stephanie Vaughn to replace Ms. Freedman as high school assistant principal. Mrs. Vaughn was an eighth-grade math teacher and department coordinator in the Palmyra Area School District. She holds a master's degree in teaching and curriculum and earned her principal's certification at Penn State. She earned her bachelor's degree from Shippensburg University.

Congratulations Class of 2017!
